INTRODUCTION.

UNDER the feudal system, as developed in England from the period of the Norman conquest, all land was held directly or indirectly of the king, who was the supreme lord of all the territory of the kingdom. When the king granted a tract of land to any noble, or knight, he required that certain services should be rendered to him in return. These services being usually military,—the contribution of men and arms and horses to the king in his wars,—it became necessary from time to time that the king should know the quantity and quality of the land, and the amount of service renderable, in respect of every holding of land throughout his kingdom. The means of ascertaining these particulars, though various, were to some extent alike in their general principle and their organization of machinery. A general survey throughout the kingdom being commanded, it was effected by certain high commissioners, few in number, calling to their aid the chief functionaries in counties, the earls or counts, and the sheriffs; and these in turn apportioned out the task among the hundredors of each wapentake or hundred; these again subdividing the labour; so that ultimately the great survey was effected by an aggregation of juries of inquiry in every lordship or manor, nay even in every village throughout the land. Such was the character of the great Survey of all the lands throughout England, made twenty years after the Norman conquest, and commonly known as the Domesday Survey, which was completed in the year 1086, and has remained ever since the oldest register extant of the value, tenure and services of the lands therein described. It is stated by an old chronicler¹ that William the Conqueror caused this survey to be made in imitation of the policy of Alfred the Great, who, at the time he divided the kingdom into counties, hundreds and tithings, had inquisition taken and digested into a register, called, from the place in which it was deposited, the Roll of Winchester. However this may be, we find that the task of making the great Norman survey of England was entrusted to four commissioners, styled the king's justiciaries, who seem to have associated with themselves some principal person or persons in each shire. The inquisitors were to inquire, upon the oaths of the sheriffs of counties, the lords of each manor, the presbyters or priests of every church, the reeves of every hundred, the bailiffs and six villeins of every village, — into the name of the place; who held it in the time of king Edward the Confessor; who was the present possessor; how many hides of land there were in the manor; how many carucates, carves or plough-lands in demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cotarii; how many servi; what freemen; how many tenants in socage; what quantity of wood; how much meadow and pasture; what mills and fish-ponds; how much added or taken away; what the gross value in king Edward's time; what the present value; and how much each freeman or soc-man had or has. All this was to be estimated — first, as the estate was held in the time of the Confessor; secondly, as it was bestowed by the Conqueror; and thirdly, as its value stood at the taking of the survey. The jurors were further to state whether any advance could be made in the value. These very numerous inquisitions being taken all over the country, the record of each was sent by the justiciaries to Winchester, and there the whole were arranged, classed, methodized, and entered in a register, such as we now see it in the admirable photographic fac-similes of the original Domesday survey.

Such was the record of the first great English survey of the lands of the kingdom in the eleventh century, and it long remained the great authority on all the subjects embraced in its inquiry. But various causes would naturally arise in course of time to render other inquiries desirable or necessary, either extending over the entire kingdom, or over a county, a hundred or wapentake, an honor or great lordship, or even limited to a single manor. Traces remain of several such inquiries as to Lancashire in the thirteenth century. In the printed copy of the Testa de Nevill (fol. 808) is an entry recording an inquisition of the county of Lancaster which sets forth that,

This is an Inquisition made by the oath of the faithful knights of the tenements given and alienated within the Lime, in the county of Lancaster, to wit by Roger Gerneth de Burg, Robert

From the names of these seventeen knights who held this undated inquisition, we are enabled to limit the time at which it was taken to some year within the eight years 1200-1207. Again, we find a perambulation of the forests of Lancashire was made by twelve knights, and recorded in 1227 or 1228.

As early as the reign of Henry II. that king instituted justices in eyre, or justices itinerant, who were to go through all the counties of England² with a general commission wider than the special one usually given to justices of oyer et terminer. For instance, it was a function of the justices in eyre to inquire of knights' fees, escheats, wardships, marriages, presentations to churches, the usurpation of the rights of the crown, as well as into any oppressions and frauds of the king's ministers and officers. The mode of procedure was for the justices in eyre, in each county in which they held their court, to deliver to the hundredors, or officers in charge of each hundred or wapentake, certain articles of inquiry, termed "Capitula Itineris," to which the hundredors had to make written replies or returns.³ During the turbulent reign of Henry III., the revenues of the crown had been considerably diminished by tenants in capite alienating without license, and by ecclesiastics, as well as laymen, withholding from the crown, under various pretexts, its just rights, and usurping the right of holding courts and other jura regalia. Numerous exactions and oppressions of the people had also been committed in this reign by the nobility and gentry claiming the rights of free chase, free warren and fishery, and demanding unreasonable tolls in fairs and markets; and again by sheriffs, escheators, and other officers and ministers of the crown, under colour of law. Edward I., who was on his return from the Holy Land on the death of his father, did not reach England till towards the end of the second year of his reign, and these abuses remained uncorrected till his return. One of the first acts of his administration after his arrival, was to institute an inquiry into the state of the demesnes, and of the rights and revenues of the crown, and concerning the conduct of the sheriffs and other officers and ministers who had defrauded the king and severely oppressed the people. The "Capitula Itineris" would have embraced nearly all these abuses; but it was found that the circuit of the justices itinerant—generally once in seven years—would not return till the sixth year of this new reign (1278), and it was necessary to afford a speedy remedy to the crown and the subject. The king, therefore, on the 11th October, in the second year of his reign (1274), appointed special commissioners for the whole kingdom, as appears from the patent rolls of this year,⁴ whereon are enrolled thirty-five articles of inquiry. Twelve other articles not on the patent rolls are among the returns, making in all forty-seven articles. The commissioners made their return in the third year of the reign (1275), and then it became necessary for the court of exchequer to have in one view such part of the returns as affected the rights of the crown and the abuses of its officers. To this end certain rolls were drawn up, containing a selection under the denomination of "Extracts," and thus the crown was furnished with evidence, upon the oath of a jury of each hundred and town of every county, as to the various matters under inquiry. From these sources the public records termed "Rotuli Hundredorum" were compiled, and have been printed in two thick folio volumes; but it is not a little remarkable that these hundred rolls, as printed, do not contain any entry or extract relative to the county of Lancaster, though the inquiries were made some seventy-six years before the creation of the duchy of Lancaster, and the vesting of its jura regalia in its duke for the time being. It may be added that the first chapter of the statute of Gloucester (6 Edward I., 1278), as to the liberties, franchises, quo warranto, &c., was founded upon the previous inquiries under this commission. Immediately after the passing of the statute of Gloucester, the circuit of the justices in eyre returned, and they had the rolls delivered to them, to inquire into the matters therein set forth; and it would seem that in many cases these later inquiries were made before the same juries of the hundreds who had made the returns to the royal commissioners.⁵

⁵ See Introduction to Rotuli Hundredorum.

The enumeration of the various inquiries respecting land, its tenure and services, during the latter part of the thirteenth century, would not be complete were we to omit to mention what is generally known as "Kirkby's Inquest" of Yorkshire in the years 1284-5, a general survey of Yorkshire in its several wapentakes, conducted by Sir John de Kirkeby, then the king's treasurer. There were also the pleas of quo warranto—inquiries by what warrant lords, knights, and others claimed to hold manors and estates, and to exercise certain privileges and franchises, and to enjoy certain immunities. These Placita de quo warranto were held before Hugh de Cressingham and his brother justiciaries, as regards Lancashire, in Trinity term (May and June) 1292.

The statute "Extenta Manerii," passed in 1276, rendered it imperative to survey or "extend" manors under its provisions, and to this legislative act we are inclined to attribute the survey of a considerable part of Lancashire, including the barony, lordship, or manor of Manchester in 1320-46, and the extent of the manor in 1322. Indeed, it is not improbable that to this statute we owe the later portions of the Testa de Nevill (A.D. 1325-30) and some parts, at least, of the Birch Feodary (ranging from A.D. 1307 to 1380), and of the Lansdowne Feodary (1349-51).

A more limited kind of inquiry was that made after the death of any baron, lord, knight, or other tenant in capite of the crown. These were termed Inquisitiones post mortem, and they were usually held before the sheriff of a county, or the king's escheator, who summoned a jury, whose finding as to the possessions of the deceased, the name, kinship, and age of the heir, &c., were all recorded on the inquisition, which was returned by the presiding officer to the king's chancery or exchequer. Of this class of inquiries was the celebrated "De Lacy Inquisition" of 1311, the first of the three records printed in the present volume. It was not, however, of the ordinary character, but included the whole estates of the earl of Lincoln, and amongst others, the entire extent of the honor of Clitheroe.⁶ It was also taken with much more care, accuracy, and minuteness of specification than was usual in these inquiries, for the reason given in page 3. It is now printed for the first time.

The second record in the volume is of the nature of an extent or survey which probably, in its perfect state, included every hundred of Lancashire. Of the original record nothing is known; and the portions of the document now first printed are derived from a copy made late in the sixteenth century. It is remarkable that there is not known to exist any full survey of Lancashire at all resembling in character "Kirkby's Inquest" of Yorkshire, of 1284-5, which has just been printed for the first time by the Surtees Society. It cannot be doubted that under the special commission of Edward I. in 1274, Lancashire was included; yet, in the hundred rolls, the product of that commission, Lancashire finds no place.

It may be suggested that this survey, so far as parts of it have reached us, like the Testa de Nevill, the Birch and the Lansdowne Feodaries, — all, so far as they can be traced, relating to the fees and the land during the first half of the fourteenth century, — may be fragments of some general record of survey, at least as to Lancashire, the original of which has long since perished. The *Testa de Nevill*⁷ has been printed by direction of the Record commissioners, and a copy of its Lancashire portions is also to be found in Gregson's Portfolio of Fragments, where is also printed a copy of Birch's MS. Feodary. A copy of the Lansdowne

Feodary,⁸ has been printed in Baines's History of Lancashire;⁹ and to these is now first added this MS. extent or survey, taken within the years 1320-46. Though the portion of it now printed only includes three of the six hundreds of Lancashire (all that remains of Salford hundred being printed in Mamecestre), viz., West Derby, Amounderness, and Lonsdale, yet, as far as it extends, there can be no doubt that it is a valuable addition to our scanty and meagre records of the state of land tenures in Lancashire in the earlier part of the fourteenth century.

The third document in the volume is a record of survey of a different kind, — what is termed a Rentale, rental or rent-roll of a manor. This was usually a long and narrow parchment roll, wherein the rents of a manor were written down, and by which the lord's bailiff collected such rents at the terms at which they were fixed to be payable. The Rental usually contained the quantities of land in each holding; the land and tenements let to each tenant; the names of the tenants; the several rents apportioned and for what time, usually a year; and the times of payment, which varied in different manors, some being at two, some at three, terms in the year, — and others, and this most generally, at the four quarterly terms of Lady-day, Nativity of John the Baptist, St. Michael's-day, and the Birth of the Lord, — or March 25th, June 24th, September 29th, and December 25th. One example of the old manorial rental will be found in Mamecestre,¹⁰ being the rental of Thomas West, lord la Warre and baron of Mamecestre, of his manor of Mamecestre, in May 1473.

The Rental in the present volume is that of Sir John de Ashton, knight, of his manor of Ashton-under-Lyne, in November 1422, thirty years earlier than that of Manchester. Besides the rental proper, this document contains the arrangement of the forms or benches in Ashton parish church, for the wives, daughters, and servants of the manor of Ashton-under-Lyne. It also contains a rental of the lands and tenements which Sir John Assheton gave to his son and heir, Thomas de Assheton, on his marriage; the yearly rent thereof being 9l. 2s. 7d., and the total of Sir John's own rental 27l. 12s. 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. making the total rental of the manor so far as set down, 36l. 14s. 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ d., to which, however, must be added the value of all the boon services and presents.

I.—THE GREAT DE LACY INQUISITION,

FEBRUARY 16th, 1311.

A BRIEF notice seems desirable of the great man and powerful noble, of whose Lancashire possessions at his death the following Inquisition forms a catalogue.

The first of the great de Lacy family, Ilbert de Laci,¹ came into England with the Conqueror. On this "Norman adventurer," as Dr. Whitaker styles him, William I. conferred the great fee of Pontefract; and his son Robert de Lacy was at one time lord of the whole hundred or wapentake of Blackburn. This Robert left two sons, Ilbert and Henry, who successively held the vast possessions of the family in this county, and Henry was succeeded by his son Robert; who, dying on the 21st June 1193, without issue, the last male of his family, devised his extensive estates, consisting of sixty knights' fees, to his uterine sister Aubrey, daughter of Robert de Lizours; who, marrying Richard Fitz-Eustace, lord of Halton and constable of Chester, took the estates to that family; and his grandson Roger, the terror and scourge of the Welsh, and for his ferocity of temper called "Hell," assumed the name of de Lacy. His son John married Margaret, daughter and coheir of Robert (son of Saber de Quincy, earl of Winchester) and his wife Hawys, fourth sister and coheir of Randal de Blundeville, earl of Chester and Lincoln; from whom, in the distribution of his lands and honours, she received the earldom of Lincoln, which descended to her daughter Margaret, the wife of John de Lacy. By patent of 23rd November 17 Henry III. (1232) the king re-granted this earldom to her husband, John de Lacy; whose son

Edmund, dying in the life-time of his mother, never assumed the title of earl of Lincoln. He married Alice de Saluces, daughter of a nobleman of Provence, and died June 5th 1258; leaving as his successor, his son and heir, Henry de Lacy, "the last and greatest man of his line;" of whom we take the following account from Dr. Whitaker's History of Whalley:—

He was the confidential friend and servant of Edward I., whom he seems not a little to have resembled in courage, activity, prudence, and every other quality which can adorn a soldier² or a statesman. In 1290 he was appointed first commissioner for rectifying the abuses which had crept into the administration of justice, especially in the Court of Common Pleas,—an office which he filled with exemplary fidelity and strictness. In 1293 he was sent ambassador to the French king to demand satisfaction for the plunders committed by the subjects of France upon the goods of the English merchants. After the death of Edward earl of Lancaster, he was appointed commander-in-chief of the army in Gascony, and viceroy of Aquitaine. In 1297 or 1298 he raised the siege of the castle of St. Catherine, near Toulouse, and expelled the French from the confines of that country. In July 1298 he led the vanguard at the memorable battle of Falkirk, against the Scots under Wallace. He was appointed one of the two commissioners to open the parliament at Carlisle on the 20th January 1307, the last year of the reign of Edward I., and in this parliament he had the precedence of all the peers of England (after the prince of Wales, who was also earl of Chester). By a rare fortune, after the death of his old master, he seems to have retained the confidence of his son, Edward II. He received from his sovereign, in recompense of his services, the honor of Denbigh, in Wales, and styled himself in consequence, (in addition to his other titles) "Dominus de Roos et Rowennoek." Over the gate of Denbigh castle, in a niche, his statue in robes is still preserved. As lord of the honor of Clitheroe, the many remaining evidences of this earl's transactions, prove him to have been active and munificent. Besides many grants of inferior consequence, he rewarded his seneschal or steward, Oliver de Stansfeld, with the manor of Worsthorn, and the de la Leghs and Middlemores with the manor of the grange of Cliviger; he confirmed and extended the privileges of his borough of Clitheroe; and he gave to the monks of Stanlaw the advowson of the parish church of Whalley, with its dependencies; procured the removal of their abbey to that fertile and beautiful site; attended the translation in person, and laid the first stone of their conventual church.

² Though not a long-lived man, his services began with the reign of Edward I. and continued beyond it. In 1273 (1 Edward I.) he besieged and took the castle of Chartley in Staffordshire, on behalf of the king.

He married Margaret (or Alice) daughter of Sir William Longespée, by whom he enjoyed all the lands of the earl of Salisbury, without that title. By this lady he had two sons, Edmund and John, both of whom died young, and two daughters, Alice and Margaret. Margaret died in her father's life-time. In 1294, despairing of male issue, Henry de Lacy surrendered all his lands to the king, who regranting them to this earl for the term of his life, and after his decease to Thomas earl of Lancaster, and Alice his wife and the heirs of their bodies; failing of which they were to remain over to Edmund the king's brother (a remarkable proof of the earl's attachment to the royal family), and to his heirs for ever. By this act the honor of Clitheroe became united to the earldom of Lancaster. The great earl died at his house of Lincoln's Inn, on the 5th February 1310, aged 60 years, and was interred in St. Paul's cathedral. Over his remains was placed a magnificent tomb, with a statue of the earl cross-legged, and in linked or chain mail; which perished with many others in the great fire of London, but which had been engraved by Hollar. Henry de Lacy left as his sole heiress, his surviving daughter Alice, who had married in her father's life-time Thomas Plantagenet, earl of Lancaster, and carried along with her an inheritance even then estimated at ten thousand marks, or £6,666 a year. Thus the honor of Clitheroe and the vast estates in Lancashire of the succeeding race of so-called Lacys, passed from them to the Plantagenets.

Dr. Whitaker characterises this document as "that most exact record, the inquisition after the death of Henry de Lacy, the last earl of Lincoln, taken A.D. 1311." After explaining that inquisitions post mortem are of little value except for the purpose of finding an heir, as their descriptions of quantities of land are almost always in round numbers, which must generally be false, the Dr. adds: "But after the death of the last earl of Lincoln, leaving only a daughter, on whose decease without male issue the vast estates were settled upon the crown, it was thought necessary to make a strict and accurate survey, and for the jurors to find with equal exactness according to the result. To this circumstance we are indebted for one of the most valuable documents from which the History of Whalley has been compiled. There is indeed another general Inquisition of the honor of Clitheroe, after the death of Henry, duke of Lancaster [who died March 24, 1361], but it is comparatively slight and inaccurate."

No copy in Latin of the original Inquisition is known to exist; and consequently this document, now first printed, can be given only in an evidently old translation. This is of an official character; being recorded in an old MS. book, entitled, "The Book of the Honor of Clitheroe," penes Dixon Robinson, esq., the Castle, Clitheroe.

In the "Calendarium Inquisitionum post Mortem, sive Escatarum," vol. i. pp. 242-244, is a very meagre abstract of the whole Inquisition; enumerating Henry de Lacy's possessions in Lancashire, as well as those in eighteen other English counties, and in Wales and its marches. It is little more than a list of local names; but it serves, as regards Lancashire, as a corroborative outline of the places named in the following translation; and shows, for instance, that the "Dennon" or "Donnon" of the translation, is identical with "Donnom," or Downham.

INQUISITION taken after the Render of Henry de Lacy late Earl of Lincoln of Lands Tenements &c held of the King in Com' Lancaster the 16th Februy 4 Edwardi 2^{di}.

⁵ Thistlelache. Lache usually means a miry hollow; but here it is a name for a profit or portion of revenue, and it is probably only a form of tack or take. In the manor of Halton, also belonging to the Lacies, was a revenue or profit called Thistle-take. It is understood to mean a payment exacted by lords of manors, for the depasturing of drove-beasts upon their commons, even if they stayed no longer than to crop a thistle. See Whitaker's Whalley, edition of 1818, p. 219.

⁷ This entry Dr. Whitaker renders "Profits of old wood, charcoal, &c. sold for the use of iron forges," &c. and this seems a more correct rendering of the obscure original. No such place is known as Weel, and no iron-mine has been known to exist for centuries.

II.—SURVEY OF 1320—1346.

IN the year 1848 a very curious MS. was entrusted by a gentleman of Manchester to the Rev. Canon Raines, with full permission for the Chetham Society to make any use of it they might deem desirable. It is imperfect, having originally consisted of twenty-four leaves of folio foolscap, but three (foll. 4, 5, 6), relating to Manchester were wanting. There is no title to the document, but its last leaf has the following endorsement :

No. 15.—Edward II. An old copy, in 1575 or 1580, of the Boundary, Rents, and other curious matters in and concerning the manor of Manc'r and other manors and places in Com: Lanc.

The first sentence of the text, however, explains the nature of the document, which appears to have been copied from some ancient roll, and gives the names of the two surveyors, and the date of the survey, as regards the manor of Manchester :

Mamecestre.—In this roll are contained Memoranda touching the manor and demesne of Mamecestre, made by the help of John de Hul-ton and Adam de Radcliffe, and of all the bordars and others in the same place, in the month of June in the 13th year of the reign of King Edward son of King Edward, [i.e. 13th Edward II., June 1320.]

So far as this document relates to the barony and manor of Manchester, it was printed both in the original Latin and in translation, in Mamecestre, vol. ii. pp. 274-299. The other portions, now first printed, relate only to three hundreds in Lancashire, — West Derby, Amounderness, and Lonsdale, and contain nothing as to those of Salford, Leyland, and Blackburn. To the hundreds of West Derby and Amounderness, no date is affixed, and it might be taken that the survey as to these was made either in 1320, or some time between that year and 1346 inclusive. But the survey as to Lonsdale begins thus :

WAPENTAKE OF LONSDALE.—An Extent of the Rent and Fees there, made before the aforesaid William and William, on Monday next after the feast of the Nativity of S^t John the Baptist, in the year of the reign of King Edward the Third after the Conquest, the 20th, [i.e. 26th June 1346].

In no former part of this imperfect document do there occur any names to which "the aforesaid William and William" can apply. It can only be assumed, therefore, that this is an extent or survey of the hundreds of West Derby and Amounderness, in some year ranging between 1320 and 1346, and that of Lonsdale on the 26th June 1346. We print it as in the original Latin, with a translation on the opposite pages.

A careful comparison of this "Survey" (now first printed) with the imperfect document entitled "Tenent: Duci Lancast^r:"¹⁹ printed in Gregson's Portfolio of Fragments, from the MSS. of Thomas Birch, esq., of Birch, and also called "The Birch Feodary," will serve, notwithstanding the inaccuracy of the Birch MS. as printed, to corroborate, check, or correct (as the case may be) the "Survey" as here printed. Sir Peter Leycester assigned the Birch Feodary to the reign of Edward II. (1307-1327); Mr. Gregson thinks it was made in 1311, or soon after the death of Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, in 1310. It is in fact of various dates; and not of the same time or times as the survey in the text, as the Christian names of many, and the surnames of some of the tenants differ from those in the "Survey." Any important variations will be pointed out in foot notes to the "Survey."

¹⁹ Henry, first duke of Lancaster, held the duchy 1351-1361.

No. III.—CUSTOM ROLL AND RENTAL OF THE MANOR OF ASHTON-
UNDER-LYNE, 1422.

I N the year 1822, the late Dr. Hibbert [afterwards Dr. Hibbert-Ware], F.R.S., &c., read before the Society of Scottish Antiquaries, in Edinburgh, a dissertation entitled “Illustration of the Customs of a Manor in the North of England during the Fifteenth Century,” which was printed in their Volume of Transactions for that year. Dr. Hibbert subsequently printed separately as an Appendix, “The Custom Roll and Rental of Ashton-under-Lyne,”—the manor referred to in his paper,—which was not inserted in the society’s transactions on account of its great length; and of this Appendix he states, “a very few copies were printed for private circulation.” As this record, in its printed form, is exceedingly rare, it has been thought desirable to reprint it in the present volume, with this difference, that originally it was an Appendix to the Dr.’s dissertation, now it is the text, and Dr. Hibbert’s observations follow in the form of notes.

Dr. Hibbert states that he possessed a copy only of the original, in which the orthography had not been preserved. This copy was formerly in the possession of one of his ancestors, but at the earnest solicitation of the family most concerned it was presented to them. The documents were collected in what was called “a book,” and they are here reprinted from the Appendix already referred to.

CUSTOM-ROLL and RENTAL of the Manor of Assheton-under-Lyne, printed verbatim from a transcript in the possession of DR. HIBBERT, entitled, "A Copy of an Old Manuscript, possessione JONÆ HARROP DE BARSLEY anno 1749. Nunc possessione Ralf. Assheton. Bar. de Middelton."⁵¹

AT the feast of Martyn in Wynter, the year of the King Henry (the sixth after the conquest) the First,⁵² all the tenants of the lordship of Assheton-under-line, taking their tenements to farm for 20 wynter terme, at John of Assheton, knight, the whiche came out of Normandy at the same feast, with all the services, customs, and usages, as after is in this same book written and rehearsed, and as it has been used and customed of old time; and every man to pay his farm at two times in the year, as the rental of this said book makes mention.

The service of the said tenants is this, y^t they shall give their presents at Yole; every present to such a value as it is written and sett in the rental; and the lord shall feed al his said tenants and their wives upon Yole Day at y^e dinner, if them like for to come; but the saied tenants and their wives, though it be for their ease not to come, they shal send neither man nor woman in their name, but if he be their son other their daughter dwellyng with them, unto the dinner. For the Lord is not bounden to feed save al only the gud man and the good wife. Also every tenant that plough has, shall plow two days, and he that half plough has shall plow a day, whether the Lord be leiver in wheat seeding other in lenten seeding; and every tenant harrow a day with their harrow in seed-

The tenants-at-will of the said lordship of Assheton have taken their holdings and their places, xx. wynter terme, as it is afore rehearsed, and in this form, y^t if any tenant or tenants list not hold their places, nor their holdings, within their term that the sit in, and they like to give up their places or their holdings, at the Martinmas, the lord shall receive them at the Martinmas next after, with this, that s^d tenent or tenents leave their places, their houses, and their closes able as they ought to be, and their land in the field as able and as good a tenant for to take, as it was at their takyng in the beginning of their terme of years; and if they do not, it shall be overseen, and the houses and the closes shall be overseen by 4 or 6 men sworne, the which shall be taken by the lord and his officers; and they shall set by their conscience what would repair the houses and the closes; and, if the lord belikes, he shall take the mone that is set, and repair the houses and the closes; and if the lord like not so to do, the tenant that is to come shall take it if him like; and, if he like not, the 4 or the 6 men sworn shall take the money that they have set, and repair the houses and closes able as they ought to be repaired; and this rule and custom shall be had when as ever any tenant removes, be it within the terme, or at the terme end; and, as touching the lond that lies to the place, these 4 or six men sworn shall set by their consciences what they hold the land worse yearly a tenant for to take, than it was at taking of tenant that removes; and as many years as is behind of his term of so meikle shall the tenant answer to the Lord, if he removes fro his place within his terme, according to the sum set by the sworn men; but it shall be well understanden, that if the tenant hold his land unto the terme, and remove unto another place at the term end, the houses and the closes shall be seen in the form as is beforesaid, but the lands in the fields shall not be seen or set as is before rehearsed, unless the tenant by fraud, and upon purpose, erede his land of miss and unreasonably, or done to his holding other diverse harmers upon malice and for evil will.

Also, the tenants-at-will of the said lordship shall muller at the 16 vessel, and go to none other miln but to the lord's milnes; and which of them that is found guilty of going to any other milne, they shall be highly amerced, and make fine at the lord's will; and the free tenants that oghen soken to the miln, shall muller as their chartours will, and as they have been accustomed of old time. And the free tenants and the tenants-at-will shall give the milner his service at all times, as it has been accustomed aforetime always; and if there be any default in the milner's service that may be proved lawfully, he shall be punished highly by the lord at his courts, as the law and the custom will, and as has been used aforetime; and the customs of the milne shall be kept, every man to keep his grist, as has been used aforetime; and when the Lord's corn come to the milne, he shall put all men out of their grist, and take their corn out of the hopper, if there be any therein, and his corn shall be ground next before all men, whent it comes to the miln without muller, or paying service to the milner, but as his lyst if he likes and curtesy to give to the said milner.

The free tenants of the Lordship of Assheton have granted to John of Assheton, for to be infeoffed in the Hall Mole [mote] of Ashton, after the customs and the burgales of the aforesaid town, to term of their lives out taken, that they will not swear upon the inquest between the tenants at will at the suit of party, but they will swear between free tenants and tenants at will; that is, to wit, 6 of the free tenants, and 6 of the tenants at will, and also between the Lord and free tenants, and the tenants at will; and also the aforesaid free tenants, and all tenants graunts for to hold the ordinances and the customs before time made and used, and the which afterward are to be made by the graunt of them to the Lords profit, and the tenants aforesaid. And the foresaid free tenants, and the tenants at will of the manor of Asshton, grants to John of Assheton, Knight, that if any of them be convicted by inquest of any trespass done to others in his beginning, and of his own wrong, that then the Lord of the town, by his Bailey, shall distrain him by his goods by great distresse, unto the time that he have amended it reasonably to the party grieved, and also to the Lord for the trespass at his will, and the trespassor have goods within the Lordship: and if that he have none, then the Lord of the town, or his Bailey, shall take him with strength of the foresaid free tenants, and tenants at will, and set him in the stocks unto the time that he have amended unto the party grieved, and to the Lord. And also they graunt the aforesaid free tenants, and tenants at will, and all that dwells in the foresaid town, that if any strange man of any other town or towns come within the foresaid town, for to do any harm to any tenants resident within the town, that anon all the tenants and residents aforesaid, within the foresaid town, shall rise with their neighbours to take and arrest the foresaid trespassor unto their power, after that they be warned by their neighbours, or by the Lord's Bailey, or by any man fro that time that there be knowing of such a misdoer; and if any of the foresaid tenants and residents refuses so to do in the form aforesaid, then will all the tenants and the residents aforesaid, that afterward of that deed, or any of them, be convicted in the Lord's court by inquest, that he so convicted shall give to the Lord 40s. within 15 days then next following, and that the Lord's Bailey shall raise the forfeit 40s. of the goods of them that are convicted; and also they grant, that if any of them resette or maintain any strange man after that day, knowing that he have done trespasse to any tenant or resident aforesaid, within the town aforesaid, then he shall give to the Lord of the town 40s. of his good, to be raised by the Bailey in the town aforesaid, after that he be convicted by the inquest. And also the tenants at will grant to the foresaid John of Asshton, Knight, that if any of them were rebel, and would not be justified after the custom and ordinance of the aforesaid town, that he shall not maintain him, nor help him, but he shall remove him out of his service, and he shall loose his love. Also the aforesaid tenants and residents will, and grantyn that if there be any fighter among them, the which shall fight with another in his beginning, after that he be convicted by the inquest, then he convicted shall give to the Lord half a mark the first time; and if he will not be chastysed by that, the second time he shall give the Lord a mark, after that he be convicted by the inquest; and if he will not be chastysed by that, the third time he shall give the Lord 20s. after that he be convicted by the inquest, to be raised by the Lord's Bailey. Also they give and grantyn, that if there be any tenant or resident within the foresaid town that have resetted any fighter with other in his beginning, that the resetter, after he be convicted by the inquest, shall amend it to the party greived, and he shall give to the Lord the pains sette upon him as before is written.

This is the covenant made between John of Assheton, Knight, and the tenants of the town of Asshton, of their swine, y^e year of the reign of King Richard the Second after the conquest, the third; that the aforesaid tenants shall have their swine going in the demesnes of the aforesaid town, fro the latter end of harvest unto sowing time, out taken the little park and hall yards, so that the aforesaid swine be ringed fro the foresaid latter end of harvest unto the foresaid time of sowing. And the foresaid tenants shall keep their swine that do no harm to the lord, nor to their neighbours, in the places out taken, that is to say, fro seeding time to harvest be in, and this covenant to be fulfilled; the aforesaid will then, when so any swine be taken in any default aforesaid, that he that owns the swine shall loose to the lord 4*d.*; each tenant of them aforesaid shall have as many swine as it is written and underneath, that is, to witt, every tenant of the tenants aforesaid, of the said town, that brews to sell, and the miller, shall hold 3 swine; and every tenant of the tenants aforesaid that holds land in the fields shall hold 2 swine; and every tenant of the tenants aforesaid that holds no land shall have one swine. The free tenants-at-will of the Lordshipe of Ashton, the year of the reign of King Henry the fourth after the conquest, the first, grantyn to John of Assheton, Knight, in his plain Hall Court, the Tuesday next before the Assion. of our Lord, that if any free tenant or tenants, that owe muller to the mill, sell their corn growing upon their tenements, and buy corn of others, and with the same corn bought, come to the milne and muller not but to the love-sucken of that corn bought, and of this they bin convicted in the lord's court by inquest, they shall pay to the lord xx p. [pence] the which shall be raised of their goods by the lord's bailey.

DR. HIBBERT'S OBSERVATIONS ON THE CUSTOM
ROLL AND RENTAL.

[The dissertation from which the following extracts are taken was read before the Society of Scottish Antiquaries in 1822. We have copied those passages only which relate to Ashton, and omitted those which refer to Scottish customs.]

SIR John of Assheton, who lived in the reign of Henry the Sixth, was, as his rent roll expressed, of Norman descent. At the period in which this knight was settled upon the estate of Assheton, tenures had assumed that definite form, to which was applied the term socage, a word of obscure etymology, supposed to denote privilege or liberty, in contradistinction to the indeterminate services of more ancient feuds. The feudal system had, at the same time, been materially aided in its progress towards a civil establishment, by the necessity imposed upon feudatories of dispensing with the military obligations of a part of their dependants, to whom was committed the care of cultivating the land, and of accepting in lieu of them the labours of husbandry, or a return of corn, cattle, or money. Landed possessors were thus enabled to attend to their military duties, disengaged from occupations that were considered in a chivalric age as base and dishonourable. The territory of Assheton, having been honoured by the residence of the Lord, had long acquired the appellation of Manor; Manerium a manendo. The relations of landlord and tenant, as expressed in the rent roll of Sir John of Assheton, were clear and explicit; while the degree of faithfulness with which services were performed, was determined by the jurisdiction of the Lord's court. In describing, therefore the customs of this manor, I shall notice in order, 1st, The rental and obligations which accrued from tenants at will; 2dly, Those which accrued from free tenants; 3dly, Those which arose from tolls, fines, or festivals; and 4thly, The conditions under which all the tenants were bound to the Lord in the jurisdiction of the Court Baron.

My first object then is to describe the rental and obligations which resulted from tenants at will. Sir John of Assheton's tenants of this description were bound to him by obligations of a base or servile nature, yet determinate, and, therefore, properly comprehended under the name of Villanum Socagium. They were excluded from partaking in the honours of the "tented field," being destined, on the manor of their lord, to perform the duties of civil and agricultural drudgery. Thus, the opprobrium cast upon such menial employments as ploughing the lord's lands or carting the lord's fuel and manure, originating from the high sense entertained, in this early period, of military allegiance, is transmitted to later times, in the debasing ideas that the name of villein, originally nothing more than a feudal term, never fails to excite. The conditions upon which lands were rented to tenants at will are related with much perspicuity. They were to be taken, as it is stated, "for twenty winter terms," the rent to be paid at two periods of the year. Any tenement might be given up by a year's notice to the lord, at the rent day of Martinmas, on the condition that it was resigned in as good condition as when first entered upon; if not, the lord or his officers might direct four or six sworn men to visit the houses and closes occupied by the tenant, who was held responsible for the sum that they might adjudge as necessary for the repair, as well as for the deterioration that the land might have sustained. A visit of this kind might indeed be made whenever a tenant removed from his possessions at the end of his term; but in such a case the land was excepted from the assessment, unless it had been injured from design or from malice. The largest farm that appears to have been taken yielded the annual rent of 39s. 6d. sterling; the lowest tenements, which were for cottages, paid no more than two shillings each.

The particular services of the tenants at will may now be enumerated; the first of them being the return of a present to the lord, at Yole or Christmas, for the sake of partaking in the annual feast of the great hall. The origin of this service is a subject of interesting inquiry. The Scandinavians who peopled the province of Normandy, and afterwards became the conquerors of England, knew no other tribute in the country from which they emigrated, than one which was of the nature of a capitation tax. It is not improbable, then, that, in subduing England, they subjected their newly acquired Saxon vassals to the same impost to which they themselves had been accustomed, by inserting it in their rentals. We accordingly find traces of this, the most ancient of all duties, in the old rent rolls of many manors in England. The English mode of collecting such a capitation tax was by requiring from tenants an annual present at Christmas, that was spent in providing a treat in which both the landlord and his vassals partook. The custom, as it appears in Sir John of Assheton's rental, is described page 94 supra.

In some manor-houses of Lancashire, once dedicated to these annual scenes of festivity, may be observed an elevation of the floor at the extremity of the great hall, or, in the place of it, a gallery which stretches along one side of the room, with the intention that it should accommodate the lord and his family, so that they might not be annoyed by the coarse rustic freedoms, which the tenants would be too apt to take with them, during the hours of their conviviality. In a hall, then, of this kind, contrived in the manor-house of Assheton, we may imagine the large Yole fire to be kindled; while in a gallery or raised floor, Sir John of Assheton, his lady, and family, together with his kinsmen, Elland of Brighouse and Sir John the Byron, are feasting apart, yet attentive to the frolics or old songs of the company below. It was on these occasions that peg-tankards were used, and horns that bore the names of the Saxons and Danes whom the Normans had ousted out of their possessions. Of such trophies was the horn of Wolfus the Saxon, the Aylesbury horn, the Ribblesdale horn, the Aston horn, the Pusey horn once belonging to Canute, or the Wassel horn of Robert de Eaglesfield. Of the description of ale that flowed merrily on these occasions, we know little; but there can be no doubt that it was as good as King Henry the VIII.'s ale, which contained in it neither hops nor brimstone.⁵⁵ We may suppose then that, on annual festivals like these, the wooden bowl, or horn, would pass freely through the hands of Sir John of Assheton's tenants-at-will; among whom were such personages as Hobbe Adamson, Hobbe of the Leghes, William the Arrowsmith, Roger the Baxter, Roger le Smith, Jack the Spencer, Jack the Hind, Elyn Wilkyn daughter, Elyn the Rose, and the widows Mergot of Stayley, Peryn's wife, and Nan of the Windy Bank, who owed suit and service, — all clad in their best hoods and brown woollen jackets and petticoats. The ancient musical instruments used in Lancashire were, a kind of fiddle, not of the present form, and a stringed instrument called the Virginals. The provincial songs of that period, few of which were less than half an hour in length, rehearsed the deeds of Lancelot du Lake, and his conquest of the Giant Tarquin, at the castle of Manchester; Ranulph of Chester, and his wars in the Holy Land; or the war-like feats and amorous prowess of the renowned Cheshire hero, Roger de Calverley. In order to preserve, as much as possible, the degree of decorum that was necessary at such meetings, there was frequently introduced a diminutive pair of stone stocks, of about eighteen inches in length, for confining within them the fingers of the unruly. This instrument was intrusted to the general prefect of manorial festivities, named the King of Misrule, whose office it was to punish all who exceeded his royal notions of decency: Accordingly, such a character appears among the list of Sir John of Assheton's tenants, under the name of Hobbe the King. It has been observed, that these entertainments were not supported by the munificence of landlords, but by the several contributions of tenants, rendered under the name of Presents; on which account, a festivity of this kind, that was wrung from the pockets of vassals, acquired, in derision, the appellation of Drink-lean. The Widow Mergot, who occupied one of the largest farms, gave for a present twenty pence. Robert Fulstaffe, who, for his house and lands, paid 3*s.* 6*d.*, rendered for his share of the feast, 14*d.* Jack the Hind, who had a tenement of the yearly rent of 19*s.* 6*d.*, paid 8*d.* Alys, that was Pole's wife, annually paid for her dwelling and lands 12*d.* and a present of 4*d.* The assessments appear so disproportionately levied, that they were probably in many cases considered in other services. Some of the cottagers are wholly free from this demand. It is evident, from an examination of the presents collected for these drink-leans, as they appear in Sir John of Assheton's rent-roll, that if they did not leave a handsome surplus to the lord, they would at least repay the expences of the table. Accordingly, it is not improbable that the name of landlord was originally attached to the host of an inn, as a satirical allusion to the manorial landlord, who never provided a dinner for his guests, without receiving for it an adequate recompense.

It is impossible to say when these annual celebrations were discontinued in England; but that they did not cease without some regret on the part of the tenants, is evident, from the custom being perpetuated to modern times in a manor of the south of England, by a sort of mock representation of the ceremonies that once took place on such occasions.

At present, says a celebrated Antiquary, "the Whitson Ales are conducted in the following manner:—Two persons are chosen, previously to the meeting, to be lord and lady of the ale, who dress as suitably as they can to the characters they assume. A large empty barn, or some such building, is provided for the lord's hall, and fitted up with seats to accommodate the company. Here they assemble to dance and regale, in the best manner their circumstances and the place will afford; and each young fellow treats his girl with a ribband or favour. The lord and lady honour the hall with their presence, attended by the steward, sword bearer, purse bearer, and mace bearer, with their several badges or ensigns of office. They have likewise a train bearer or page, and a fool or jester dressed in a party coloured jacket, whose ribaldry and gesticulation contribute not a little to the entertainment of some part of the company. The lord's music, consisting of a pipe and taber, is employed to conduct the dance. Some people think this custom is a commemoration of the ancient Drinklean, a day of festivity formerly observed by the tenants and vassals of the lord of the see within his manor; the memory of which, on account of the jollity of these meetings, the people have preserved ever since. The glossaries inform us that this Drinklean was a contribution of tenants towards a potation, or ale, provided to entertain the lord or his steward."⁵⁶

In the next place, those particular services of villein socage may be detailed, which were considered so particularly degrading as to be abhorrent to the feelings of all who were entitled to bear arms. In the manor of Assheton, every tenant-at-will was thus commanded: "He that plough has, shall plough two days. He that half plough has, shall plough a-day, whether the lord be liever in wheat seeding, or in lenton seeding; and every tenant harrow a-day with their harrow in seeding time, when they bin charged. And they shall cart, every tenant ten cartful of turve from Doneam Moss to Assheton, and shere four days in harvest, and cart a day corn." This service, so profitable to the lord, was familiarly called Boon-work. Hence an old adage, still retained in the north of England, when a man is supposed to be working for nothing, "that he has been served like a boon-shearer." Yet it is not improbable that some small return was generally made for such labour. A friend of mine has informed me that, in a MS. relating to the disbursements of an old family in Lancashire, mention is made of gloves that were given to certain boon-shearers.

Another service of Sir John Assheton's tenants was, that "they should pay a principal at their death, to wit, the best beast they have." This is evidently a heriot. It is almost unnecessary, on the present occasion to remark, that the word heriot has been variously derived from the Latin herus, intimating that it was a tribute belonging to the lord; while Sir Henry Spelman finds a Saxon original for the word, signifying a horse, because that animal constituted the first heriot. In the earliest period of feudality, a superior possessed an uncontrouled dominion over the entire property of his vassal; yet, when slain in battle in the company of his lord, a remission was made, in consideration of his faithful services, of any further claim upon his property than what might remain on the field. This usually consisted of a horse, which was accepted as a release, or a heriot. The principal of heriotism, thus introduced, was subsequently extended to that class of dependents who were retained in their lord's employ to perform the baser services of the manor. As their property, therefore, consisted of cattle, or of implements of husbandry, the heriot due to the lord was the best beast, cow or horse, of which the tenant might die possessed. This condition being fulfilled, every further claim upon the goods of the deceased was remitted. It is easily, then, to be conceived, that, in proportion as feudality acquired a civil establishment, this oppressive relic of ancient military subjection would be found particularly galling. In the manor of Assheton there are many traditional stories still remaining on the subject of such heriots or principals. A tenant's boy, on the death of his father, was driving an only cow to the manor-house of certain adjoining demesnes, named Duckinfield. He was met by the lord of the place, with whose person and rank he was unacquainted, who questioned him whither he was taking his beast? "I am driving it as far as Duckinfield, for the heriot," replied the boy. "My father is dead,—we are many children,—and have no cow but this. Don't you think the devil will take Sir Robert for a heriot when he dies?" The lad was fortunately addressing a humane landlord. "Return home," said the knight. "Take the cow back to thy mother; I know Sir Robert,—I am going to Duckinfield myself, and will make up the matter with him."

But, besides the obligation of a heriot due to Sir John of Assheton, there were other claims upon the property of a deceased tenant. He was commanded "to pay a principal at his death,—to wit the best beast he had;" but as it is added in the rent-roll, "which other deed next after holy kirk." This latter clause alludes to a description of ecclesiastical heriots, known by the name of Mortuaries, or Corse Presents, from the circumstance that they were brought to church along with the corpse. The custom arose from posthumous bequests being rendered in lieu of neglected tithes; these by frequent usage, being converted into regular church-dues. When, therefore, the acknowledgment of a heriot was accepted by a feudal lord, in satisfaction of the right which he claimed to the property of a deceased tenant, by virtue of the dominion assumed over his person, the clergy also were willing to accept of a similar composition, in requital of the demands which they had upon his soul for undischarged oblations. Hence, a mortuary was termed, in the laws of Canute, Soul Scot, or Symbolum Animæ.

The mortuary, in the order of its exaction, took the precedence of the heriot; and a requital of the demands which the kirk was supposed to possess over the soul of a deceased vassal, was paramount to the lord's claim over his person.

Another service of Sir John of Assheton's tenants, was their obligation to grind at the lord's mill. This was in a popular sense called Socome, sucken or soken.

In the manor of Assheton, a tenant of the name of John of the Edge, seems to have been the Milner, who was engaged to pay for his two mills the annual rent of 16s. 4d.; the mills "to be held up (or repaired) at the costes of the lord." The 16th vessel, to which the tenants were to muller their corn, was the miller's remuneration, and often called his toll. It would also appear, that the corn, which was consumed on the manor, was allowed to be dried by the lord's fuel; and that grain purchased in a dry state from other manors, where the lord's fuel would be consequently saved, was liable to a toll of only the 24th part, which was hence named Love-sucken, meaning a privileged obligation. The ordinances of the lord's court relating to the mill were as follows:—There was a law to prevent an evasion of the toll; for, if any one sold the corn growing upon his own tenement, and secretly bought corn from other tenants of the lord, — if he offered the same to the miller as corn that had been produced on another manor, and that not having been dried by the lord's fuel, was only liable to the toll of the Love-socome;—such an offender, if convicted in the lord's court, was liable to a penalty of twenty-pence. The regulations of a more general nature directed, that all the free tenants, who “owed soken” to the mill, should muller as their charters expressed; but the tenants-at-will should be restricted to the 16th vessel. If any tenant also owing socome [soke] went to any other mill but the lord's he was to be highly amerced, and was to pay a fine. The miller was to have his service (or toll) at all times; and, if there was any default in him that could be proved, he was to be severely punished. The last regulation of the mill strikingly elucidates the feudal manners of the 15th century, since it enforces the concession that is expected on all occasions to the convenience of a superior. The tenants are formally warned, that “when the lord's corn comes to the miln, he shall put all men out of their grist, and take their corn out of the hopper, if there be any therein; his corn shall be ground next before all men when it comes to the miln, without muller or paying service to the milner, but as his lyst if he likes, and curtesy to give to the said milner.”

Attached to these ordinances, was a covenant between Sir John of Assheton and his tenants, relative to the keeping of swine. These animals were allowed to range in the demesnes of the town, from the latter end of August until sowing time, provided that they were properly ringed and did no harm; in default whereof, the owner was to loose him to the lord 4*d.*, or by this sum redeem him from poundage.

The brewer who brewed to sell, and the miller, were allowed to keep three swine; the tenants who had land in the fields, two swine; and he who held no land might have one swine.

Having given a view of the rent and services required from Sir John of Assheton's tenants-at-will, the relations in which his free tenants stood to him may be in the second place explained. In the tenures now to be described, we are presented with an illustration of what is termed by the lawyers liberum socagium, or free socage, where the obligations are not only certain but honourable. A numerous list of free tenants swell the manor roll of Sir John of Assheton, who, for the most part deriving their names from the paternal lands that they occupied, are declared absque omnibus servitiis et exceniis, (Anglice, presents) liberi. In this list no appellations can be detected that denote any menial occupations of life; while, among the tenants-at-will, we find mention made of such individuals as William the Walker, (or renter of a fulling mill), John the Slater, Robbin the Cropper, Robert le Wright, or William the Arrow-smith.⁵⁷ It also appears, that the Lord of the Manor took every occasion to announce the wide line of distinction that subsisted between the rank of the free tenants and that of the lowly tenants-at-will. An ordinance is to be found in his book of customs, settling the degree of precedence that was to be observed among their wives, daughters, and women servants, while upon a Sabbath they arranged themselves on the forms of the Parish Kirk; a regulation of this kind being well calculated to preserve the peace of the Church from being disturbed with the disputes of these females, in their demand for places suitable to the several spheres of life in which they moved.

The lands originally granted to Sir John of Assheton's tenants, were either with a view to personal service in the field of battle, the obligation being rather understood than expressed, — or they were grants of mere accommodation to the owners of contiguous manors; a slight acknowledgment in money being all that was demanded in return. The highest annual rent paid by a free tenant, (John of the Highrode), was 7*s.* 1*d.*; the lowest rendered by Thomas de Staneley, was a penny, if we except a yearly tribute for a tenure paid by Richard de Bardsley, which consisted of a rose. This estate had been granted to Sir John of Assheton's brother, of the order of Saint John of Jerusalem. The profits of it, therefore, were handed over by Richard de Bardsley, for the support ⁵⁷ That a distinct profession of an arrow smith should exist in a small town like Assheton, can create no surprise if we refer to what Drayton has affirmed of the Lancashire Bowmen.

“ Besides her natives have been anciently esteemed,
For Bowmen near our best, and ever have been deemed
So loyal that the guard of our preceding kings
Of them did most consist.”

Also in the ancient poem of Flodden Field, Lord Stanley is made to address the followers whom he led from the counties of Lancashire and Cheshire, after the following manner:—

“ My Lancashire most lively wights,
And chosen men from Cheshire strong;
With sounding bow your feathered flights,
Let fiercely fly your foes among.”

of the knights hospitallers in the Holy Land, where the grand master of the order resided; a rose being at the same time all that was exacted by Sir John, as a yearly acknowledgment that the grant had emanated from the Lordship of Assheton. This donation appears to have been presented by a female, who, from the circumstance, acquired the name of Elyn the Rose.

In the third place we may notice the other sources of the lord's income, as derived from tolls, fines, &c. The turbary of an adjoining Moss brought him in, by estimation, 5*l.* 16*s.* annually; the toll of the fairs yielded two marks; the courts and fines 40*s.*; and, as Sir John appears to have neglected no means to augment his income, he drew from the gyst-ale, or gysing feast (an annual festival of the town of Assheton), a sum of 20*s.* which was collected from the conductors of it, who were, Margret the widow of Hobbe the King, Hobbe Adamson, Roger the Baxter, Robert Somayster, Jenkin of the Wood, and Thomas of Curtnall. For an account of the gyst-ale, I have in vain searched among the large mass of popular antiquities collected by Brand and Ellis. A veteran, however, of this almost obsolete feast, who had known it in better days, has furnished me with some curious particulars regarding its mode of celebration. These guisings (or more properly disguisings), termed also marlings, were celebrated in the spring, after the fields had been manured with marle, an operation preparatory to the sowing of wheat. They were the principal feasts or ales in Lancashire; and the disorders which never failed to ensue from them are transmitted at the present day in the modern provincial acceptation of the word Marlock, which, in this county, denotes a great disturbance or riot of any kind. For the celebration of the gyst-ale of a township, a contribution was raised from all ranks of society. The lord of the manor, the esquire, or the farmer, whose bounty might be supplicated, came forward and announced the sum that he intended to give. The treasurer of the feast exclaimed "a largesse!" The populace, with one voice, demanded "from whom?" The sum was not then actually published; but it was vauntingly proclaimed that the donor, who had always on these occasions the title of lord prefixed to his name, had contributed a part of several thousand pounds. After the collection had been made, an immense garland was formed of every flower the season afforded, being also decked with a profusion of ribbons; but the number and variety of the silver, or silver plated vessels, which were suspended from every part of it, constituted its chief attraction. The villagers, who were overwhelmed with rustic finery, then formed themselves into a procession, in which they were attended by an Arbiter Elegantiarum, named the King. The Fool was an indispensable character; a grotesque cap, a tail hanging to the ground, the usual appendage of a bell behind, and a formidable mask, constituted the peculiarities of his apparel. He was in more ancient times mounted on a hobby; and his office, which was a lucrative one from the money he collected, was named Hobriding. Thus, in the manor roll of Assheton, Jack the mercer paid to his lord for such a privilege the annual sum of 6s. 8d. In a later period these guisings, from the circumstance of taking place in several populous villages at one time, have provoked such a desire for pre-eminence, that the inhabitants have spared no expence in prolonging them, or in giving to them the greatest éclat; they have undergone in the same spring frequent repetitions; and, while the contributions have been repeated, the poor have been exposed during the remainder of the year to considerable penury. The sum thus collected amidst the rivalry of contending townships has been immense; a single village⁵⁸ having been known to expend in one season from two to three thousand pounds. It was probably owing to the ruinous expence which attended these festivals, that they were suffered to become extinct.

Sir John's unappreciable income consisted of presents which he received at Yule; of heriots; of the personal services of ploughing, reaping, and carting turf. But the amount of his certain income as drawn from free tenants and tenants-at-will, from the obligations to grind at the lord's mill, from tolls and fairs, from the liberty of cutting turf at the moss, and from an annual festival celebrated in the town of Assheton named the Gyst-Ale, amounted to the sum of 36*l.* 14*s.* 6³/₄*d.* sterling, out of which he made a settlement to his son and heir, of lands and tenements, to the annual value of 9*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.* upon the occasion of his marriage with a daughter of Sir John the Byron. He also gave some houses and lands to a few favourite servants for the term of their lives, as, John the Cook, John of the Wood (the owner of a basket-field), and to others; while to two of his sons he gave places and gardens in the town. Another grant to the last mentioned individuals, Rauf of Assheton and Robyn of Assheton, merits much attention. It is stated that they "have the Sour Carr Guld rode and stane rynges for the term of their lives, Rauf of the gift of John of Assheton, knight, the elder, and Robyn of the gift of John of Assheton, knight, the younger," This donation evidently alludes to the privilege of Guld-riding, a custom that, in Scotland at least, is of great antiquity, having been intended to prevent lands from being over-run with the weeds, which, from their yellow colour, were named gools, or gulds.⁵⁹

A large portion of low wet land in the vicinity of Assheton was, in John of Assheton's days, named the Sour Carr (Carr being synonymous with the Scottish word Carse, and the well known term sour implying an impoverished state of the carr.) It had been overrun with corn marigolds, named, as in Scotland, Carr-gulds. These were considered so destructive to the growth of the corn, that the lord of the manor was compelled to enforce some rigorous measures for their extirpation. A manorial regulation, therefore, existed, called Carr-guld riding. Ralph of Assheton, Sir John's son in consequence of a second marriage, and Robin his brother, were, on a certain day in the spring, invested with the power of riding over the lands of the Carr, named the Carr-guld Road; of levying fines for all carr-gulds that were found among the corn; and, until the penalties were paid, of punishing transgressors by putting them into the stocks, or stone rings, or by incarceration. It appears that Ralph of Assheton became, by his alliance with a rich heiress, the lord of the neighbouring manor of Middleton, and soon afterwards received the honour of knighthood; being, at the same time, entrusted with the office of vice-constable of the kingdom, and, it is added, of lieutenant of the tower. Invested with such authorities he committed violent excesses in this part of the kingdom. In retaining also for life the privilege granted him in Assheton of Guld riding, he, on a certain day in the spring, made his appearance in this manor clad in black armour (whence his name of the Black Boy), mounted on a charger and attended with a numerous train of his own followers, in order to levy the penalty arising from the neglect of clearing the land from Carr-gulds. The interference of so powerful a knight belonging to another lordship could not but be regarded by the tenants of Assheton as the tyrannical intrusion of a stranger; and as Sir Ralph, sanctioned by the political power given to him by Henry VI., exercised his privilege with the utmost severity, the name of the Black Boy is at the present day regarded with no other sentiments than those of horror. Tradition has, indeed, still perpetuated the prayer that was fervently ejaculated for a deliverance from his tyranny:

Sweet Jesu, for thy mercy's sake,
And for thy bitter passion,
Save us from the axe of the tower,
And from Sir Ralph of Assheton.

Upon the death of the Guld Rider of Assheton, Sir John's heir and successor abolished the usage forever; and reserved from the estate a small sum of money for the purpose of perpetuating, in an annual ceremony, the dreaded annual visits of the Black Boy. This is kept up at the present day. An effigy is made of a man in armour; and since Sir Ralph was the son of a second marriage (which, for this reason, had been esteemed by the heir of Sir John as an unfortunate match), the image is deridingly emblazoned with some emblem of the occupation of the first couple that are linked together in the course of the year. The Black Boy is then fixed on horseback, and, after being led in procession round the town, is dismounted, made to supply the place of a shooting-butt, and, all fire-arms being in requisition for the occasion, he is put to an ignominious death.

Our fourth and last object of attention relates to the jurisdiction of the manor now under consideration. In the earliest history of Norman tenures the Lord of Assheton had the absolute power of life and death; strong dungeons were constructed near the manor house, the remains of which still appear; and a meadow adjoining the town, that still bears the name of Gallows field, was selected for a summary place of execution. But as civil liberty gained ground in the country, the conditions of jurisdiction, under which all the tenants became bound to a superior, were considerably ameliorated in the institution of the lord's court, or, as it was originally named, the Court Baron; so that, in time, a seat of justice of this kind was accounted so inseparable an ingredient in a manor, as to render it liable to be forfeited if it did not contain tenants sufficient to make up a jury or homage. The free tenants and tenants-at-will granted, therefore, to Sir John of Assheton, to be justified in the great Hall Mote of Assheton, according to the customs, ordinances, and burgales of the town. They engaged not to swear upon an inquest between the tenants-at-will, at the suit of party, but between six of the free tenants and six of the tenants-at-will, or between the lord and the same number of tenants. Any one convicted of unprovoked trespass done to others was to suffer a distraint of goods; or, in failure of possessing goods within the lordship, was to be taken by the lord or his bailey, "with the strength of the free tenants and tenants-at-will," and to be set in the stocks, until he had made a reasonable amendment to the aggrieved party, and to the lord at his will. If any strange man of any other town came to do harm to any tenants of Assheton, then, anon, all the residents, upon being duly warned, were to rise, take and arrest the trespasser unto their power; and if any of the tenants and residents refused so to do, or if any of them resetted or maintained any strange man, knowing that he had done trespass, he was, upon conviction, to give the lord 40s. within fifteen days following, or the bailey might raise the amount by a distraint upon his goods. If, also, there was any fighter among the tenants and residents, who should "fight with another in his beginning," he was, on being found guilty, to give the lord half a mark; for the second offence to pay a mark; and for the third, twenty shillings: any resetter, also, was upon conviction bound to amend it to the party grieved, and to give the lord the pains set upon him. These edicts were well calculated for a quarrelsome state of society, and may be applicable to the natives of Assheton at the present day; since the fighters of Sir John's time, as well as the resettlers, appear to have transmitted a large portion of their respective virtues to their posterity. — Such were the laws of the court baron; and the consequence of any person refusing to be justified by them was, that the lord would remove him out of his service, so that he should lose his love, i. e. redeem it by proper concession or punishment.

Some idea may be now formed of the ancient conditions of freeholders and tenants-at-will. Tracing the latter through all the degrading obligations of vassalage, — through presents, boon-work, heriots, or mortuaries,—little are we inclined to wish for a revival of what are improperly named “the good old times.” In an iron age, like that of Henry VI. the profession of arms was the most enviable of all distinctions; it gave to an individual that rank in society and those privileges which could be obtained on no other condition; while husbandry languished under the opprobrium of villainage. To these grievances may be added, the wanton tyranny of the feudal tyrant himself, which too often outstretched the salutary laws that were made to restrain his unprovoked aggressions. It is truly remarked by the ingenious author of Ivanhoe, in his letter to Dr. Dryasdust of York, that, when the worthy person whom he addresses “is placed in his own snug parlour, and surrounded by all the comforts of an Englishman’s fireside, he is not half so much inclined to believe that his own ancestors led a very different life from himself,—that the shattered tower, which now forms a vista from his window, held a baron who would have hung him up at his own door without any form of trial,—that the hinds, by whom his little pet farm is managed, would, a few centuries ago, have been his slaves,—and that the complete influence of feudal tyranny once extended over the neighbouring village, where the attorney is now a man of more importance than the lord of the manor.”

AFTER-WORDS, BY THE EDITOR.

A few words may be added to what Dr. Hibbert-Ware has said of the names in this Rental, and these may be classed as (I) Personal, and (II) Local names. Personal names consist of (1) Christian or Baptismal names, and (2) of Surnames; often of a mixture of both. The surnames are often (3) local from the place held, or else (4) taken from the trade, occupation, or office of the holder.

The names under (1) are a large class, of which it is only necessary to notice the surnames made out of Christian names, usually by adding the word "son." Thus, Adam Wilson Doggeson, is Adam the son of Will the son of Dodge (a corruption of Dodd's, from Dodd or Dodds, an Anglo-Saxon name, perhaps the same as Dot). Dicon Hoggerson = Richard the hog-herd's son, Diquon being an early Norman nurse-name of Richard. Hanson, Jenkinson, and Jak, Jakson, are Flemish in origin, Hans = John; so is Jenkyn = Jan-kin, or little John. Jak, Jack, Jackson, may be either from John or James in its form of Jac-obus. Hobbe is a form of Robert; Hodge of Roger; whence Hobson, Hodgson. Hobbe Adamson is Robert the son of Adam. Thomlyn and Tomkyn are alike nurse-names of Thomas. Thomas Sanderson is Thomas the son of Sander or Alexander. Robin is a diminutive of Robert. Thus Wilkyn Robynson = Little Will the son of Robert. Atkynson is Atty's or Arthur's son. Rawlins, Rawlinson are from Ralph, Rauf. Piers (French Pierre) is a form of Peter.

Local names (3) are also a large class, and originally all names of places described features of the place itself. It may suffice to name a few, — those ending in leghe, or ley, denoting open places, usually meadow, pasture, or grass land, e.g. the White Legh, Buckley, Bardesley, the Leghes, and the Nether (lower) Leghes; Worsley (originally the Worked-ley), Shepley = the sheep-ley, Staneley and Stanley, the stony-ley; Lusley, perhaps the lussom, beautiful or pleasant ley. Colwel = Coldwell; Carr, a marshy place, — the Old Thane's Carr is a relic of Saxon times, while the Dede Carr may mean the dead swamp. Names del Wood, del Wood-field, del Leghes, del Cross, always denote the definite article "of the;" while de signifies "of" only, as de Hollinworth, del Knolles. Great varieties of spelling of the same names occur, and this may often be discovered by comparing the names of the free tenants in one part of the Rental with what should be the same names in another part, as that where the rents are classed as payable at different terms, as Lady Day (March 25), Pentecost or Whitsuntide, St. John Baptist (June 24), Michaelmas (Sept. 29), Martinmas (Nov. 11), and the Nativity of the Lord or Christmas; or in the list of wives, &c., to be seated in Ashton church, where the husbands' names vary from those in the Rental. Thus Robyn Somayster is changed into Robert Somdyst. The form of "Rhodi" in the list of seats should often be read "Richardi." The Christian names of the women are few; Margaret, in its varied forms, and Syssot being the most frequent. Malkyn also occurs, i.e. little Mall or Mary. Joan is, of course, Jane.

(4) The surnames derived from trade, occupation or office, are also numerous. Robert the Walker holds the Walke Milne or fulling-mill; Roger le Baxter, the bakehouse; Roger the Smith; Thomas and John, the Cook; Jenkyn and William, the Cocker; Jak the Spencer (i.e. steward or clerk of the kitchen) is the Bailly or bailiff of the lord, who had to account for the profits of the booths, the shops, and the mealhouse, as well as for the tolls, the fair and markets of the manor; Jack the Mercer; Jak the Hind or farm bailiff; John the Slater; Roger le Cropper, Robin the Cropper; Robert le Wright; Richard the Hunt or Hunter; William the Arrowsmith; Hobbe the King (of misrule), &c., indicate the occupations of one class of tenants. Among the local names, many are still extant in and around Ashton-under-Lyne, as Hadfield, Aldwinshagh (Audenshaw), Hurst, Shepley, Lusley, which appears by an assessment of 1617 to have comprised (with lanes) 421 Lancashire acres. Many of the tenants paid a few pence yearly in respect of Lusley, and probably it was a grazing common. Erley may mean the ered or ploughed ley. Hobbyding, Robert's ridding, clearing or assart. There were two corn mills, both held by John of the Edge. The Claydons then held Taunton; the Byrons held the Whitworth lands in Droylsden; and many of the tenants had intakes or parcels of intakes in Palden Wood, the Alt Hey, &c. The Sour Acre and the Sour Carr-guld Rode, with the Stone Rings, are sufficiently explained by Dr. Hibbert-Ware. The Bestal was perhaps a stall or shed for cattle. Blackenows are the Black Knolls or little hills; Alt Hey;

Mossley; the Ras- or Ros-botham, the rasp or sudden bottom; Aspenhalgh, the hough or hill of the Aspens or poplars. Cowleshagh is perhaps Cole's little wood — Cole is a baptismal name, occurring in Domesday. Hollinworth, the farm or homestead in the hollies. Chadwick, the village or hamlet of Cead or Chudde. The Sherewinde is literally cut-wind. Rugheghs = the rough eas or eyes, water meadows. Redy Legh, the reedy meadow. Altogether this Custom Roll and Rental presents a curious catalogue of Lancashire personal and local names in the early part of the fifteenth century.

The Twenty-fourth Report

OF THE

COUNCIL OF THE CHETHAM SOCIETY,

Read at the Annual Meeting, held, by permission of the Feoffees, in the Audit Room of Chetham's Hospital, on the 18th of March, by adjournment from the 1st, 1867.

THE first of the publications for the year 1866-7, and the sixty-ninth in the Chetham Series, is The Admission Register of the Manchester School, with some Notices of the more distinguished Scholars. Edited by the Rev. JEREMIAH FINCH SMITH, M.A. Rector of Aldridge, Staffordshire. Vol. 1.

Every one at all accustomed to such researches must be well aware how difficult it is, after a long lapse of time, to collect and ascertain with sufficient fulness and exactness the facts connected with the biography of the scholars of any particular school. Most fortunately, the history of the scholars of the Manchester Free Grammar School has been undertaken by one (himself the son of a late most deservedly respected high master) who, in addition to the other qualifications for such a work, is possessed of those of untiring industry and undaunted perseverance. Wherever there was a possibility of obtaining information his inquiries have been assiduously made. Undiscouraged by failure in one channel he has, where practicable, constantly tried another; and a better proof cannot be afforded, both of the extent of his applications to all available sources, and the general success with which they have been attended, than the present volume, which extends from 1730 to 1775, and gives biographical notices of more than four hundred scholars. The succeeding one, which will bring the Register nearer to the time of living contemporaries of many of the scholars, will be anxiously looked for by all who have examined the first portion of the work, which shows in the most striking manner from what various social elements the school derived its pupils, and in how many different modes of life they afterwards became distinguished. The Register, when completed, cannot but take a permanent place as a necessary and most agreeable work of reference, and as a faithful and extensive biographical register and record of scholars, there has been nothing yet published, with regard to the alumni of any other school in the kingdom, of the same elaborate and satisfactory character.

The second book for the year 1866-7, and the seventieth in the Chetham series, is "The Stanley Papers, Part III. Vol. 3, containing the Private Devotions and Miscellanies of James Seventh Earl of Derby, K.G." Edited by the Rev. F. R. RAINES, M.A., F.S.A., Honorary Canon of Manchester, &c.

The Memoir of James Earl of Derby, by Canon RAINES, and which occupies with the Appendix the two previous volumes of the Third Part of the Stanley Papers, has been already noticed in the Report of the Council for the year 1865-6. That most interesting and attractive biography, in which every fact, circumstance, and document, which the unwearied diligence of the reverend author could collect respecting its illustrious subject, has found a place, is followed in this concluding volume by the Earl's Prayers and Meditations, and his History of the Isle of Man. The former show how deep, fervent, and constant his religious feelings and convictions were; the latter how keen and penetrating was his insight into character, how solid and well-weighed his matured judgment in civil affairs. Had he given us Charles and the principal personages of his court, either in his earlier or later day, struck off with the same vigorous and happy power of graphic delineation with which he has represented the comparatively-speaking uninteresting officials of the Isle of Man, what an invaluable addition would have been afforded to the grand historical gallery of that most eventful reign.

It is impossible to conclude the notice of this volume without returning the thanks of the Council and of the members of the CHETHAM SOCIETY to Canon RAINES—the donor, also it should be mentioned, of the fac-simile plate of the Countess of Derby's autograph letter—for the very careful and judicious manner in which he has performed the responsible duties of Biographer and Editor, and for the ample justice which he has rendered to the memory of one of the noblest characters which English history has to boast of.

The third and last publication for the year 1866-7, and the seventy-first in the Chetham Series, is "Collectanea Anglo-Poetica, or a Bibliographical and Descriptive Catalogue of a portion of a Collection of early English Poetry, with occasional extracts and remarks, biographical and critical. By the Rev. THOMAS CORSER, M.A., F.S.A. &c. Part 3."

It will, the Council are sure, afford the members pleasure to find that Mr. Corser's very valuable work is making, if not rapid, at least steady and certain progress. The present volume begins with Breton and ends with Chamberlaine, and contains one hundred notices. Those of Breton's voluminous works, (and which, unequal as they are, will always interest from their occasional poetical beauties,) extend from p. 1 to p. 96, and afford a much more complete view of the writings of this author, several of which are exceedingly rare, than has hitherto been given. The remaining articles in B, and the commencing ones in C, include several poetical volumes which will be new even to those who are well acquainted with early English poetry, and the reader will find much to deserve his attention in the biography of the various authors, the well-selected extracts from their works, and the accurate bibliographical information which is so abundantly supplied. It is scarcely necessary to say that the present volume is characterized by the same care, exactness and research which were so conspicuous in the preceding ones, and it only remains to be wished that no circumstances may occur to retard Mr. Corser's future progress; and that a work so important in itself, and affording so fitting a memorial of himself and his library, may be prosecuted without interruption to its close.

All the three volumes enumerated, for the year 1866-7, have now been issued to the members.

The Council have great regret in adverting to the loss which their body and the Society have sustained by the death of Mr. THOMAS HEYWOOD, of Hope End during the last year. From the commencement of the CHETHAM SOCIETY he had taken a warm interest in its proceedings and success. To the latter he contributed in no slight degree by the various works in the Chetham series, in which he so efficiently performed the duties of editor.

For this office he was indeed eminently adapted. The range of his information was so extensive, and he had the power of presenting the results of his reading and observation in so lucid, condensed and attractive a form that the introductions to the works edited by him will always be referred to with undiminished pleasure. To be able to infuse life and spirit into materials which are the acquisition of original research is one of the highest merits of the historical antiquary, and to this merit Mr. THOMAS HEYWOOD could undoubtedly lay claim. It is therefore greatly to be lamented that he did not devote a portion of his leisure to the production of a work of larger extent on some one of the many subjects which engaged his attention, and which might have afforded in a greater degree than scattered specimens, however elegant, learned, or satisfactory, can do, a just idea of the acquirements and capacity of a very able and accomplished contributor to the great common fund of historical literature and philology.

The first of the publications for the year 1867-8, being No. 72 in the Chetham Series, is the second volume of the Collectanea relating to Manchester and its Neighbourhood, at various periods. Compiled, arranged, and edited by JOHN HARLAND, Esq., F.S.A., vol. 2, which is now ready for delivery. The further publications contemplated, or in progress, are :

1. Collectanea Anglo-Poetica, Part 4. By the Rev. THOMAS COSER, M.A., F.S.A.

2. The Visitation of Lancashire in 1532. Edited by WILLIAM LANGTON, Esq.

3. The Register of the Manchester Free Grammar School, with Notices and Biographies of distinguished Scholars. Edited by the Rev. J. FINCH SMITH, M.A., Rector of Aldridge. Vol. 2.

4. A Collection of Ancient Ballads and Poems, relating to Lancashire. Edited by JOHN HARLAND, Esq., F.S.A.

5. Worthington's Diary and Correspondence. The concluding part. Edited by JAMES CROSSLEY, Esq., F.S.A., President of the Chetham Society.

6. Documents relating to Edward third Earl of Derby and the Pilgrimage of Grace. By R. C. CHRISTIE, Esq., M.A.

7. The Great De Lacy Inquisition of 1311. The Boundary Rents and other curious matters in and concerning the Manor of Manchester, and other Manors and Places in Com. Lanc. ; and the Custom Roll and Rental of the Manor of Ashton-under-Lyne. Edited by JOHN HARLAND, Esq., F.S.A.

8. Tracts printed in the Controversy between Sir Thomas Mainwaring and Sir Peter Leycester, as to the legitimacy of Amicia, daughter of Hugh Cyveliok, Earl of Chester, 1673-9. Collected and republished, with an Introductory Preface and Review of the Controversy.

9. Diary of John Angier, of Denton, from the original Manuscript, with a reprint of the Narrative of his Life, published in 1685 by Oliver Heywood.

10. A Selection from Dr. John Byrom's unprinted Remains in Prose and Verse.

11. A new Edition of the Poems Collected and Published after his Death, corrected and revised, with Notes, and a Prefatory Sketch of his Life.

12. The later Heraldic Visitations of Lancashire.

13. Hollinworth's Mancuniensis. A new Edition. Edited by CANON RAINES.

14. A Volume of Extracts, Depositions, Letters, &c., from the Consistory Court of Chester, beginning with the Foundation of the See.

15. Extracts from Roger Dodsworth's Collections in the Bodleian Library at Oxford relating to Lancashire.

16. Annales Cestrienses.

17. Chetham Miscellanies. Vol. 4.

18. Lancashire and Cheshire Funeral Certificates.

19. A General Index to volumes XXXI. to LX. of the Publications of the Chetham Society.
